I would like to personally express my sincere gratitude to Alan Osborne of VCIT Consulting for his professionalism, integrity, expertise and dedication to superior service.

During the development phase of Strangeloop Networks, we needed to test the efficacy of our product as quickly as possible. We were looking to partner with an experienced and agile technology company that could design and implement a hosted development/test environment on an extremely compressed schedule. We also needed our entire development team to have secure, remote access to all aspects of this environment. In short, we needed reliable access from anywhere to the applications and data that our business depends on.

We chose VCIT Consulting because they demonstrated the required expertise, they understood both our technical and business requirements, and they could deliver us anytime, anywhere access to our applications and data.

Alan helped us to develop an initial design specification, provided us with a detailed roadmap outlining the implementation plan, assisted with sourcing hardware and software that we required, and worked long hours to execute the plan, finishing the work ahead of schedule. As a result, we were able to meet our business targets for our product launch.

I highly recommend VCIT Consulting to any company looking for superior service from an experienced provider of hosted computing and consulting services.

Sincerely,

Lee Purvis
